

CARIBBEAN

St. Barts' gourmet festival returns in November

Oct 03, 2021

🖨️ | A+ A-

French gastronomy is the culinary focus of the St. Barts Gourmet Festival. Photo Credit: Michael Gramm

The eighth annual St. Barts Gourmet Festival returns this year, with a roster of celebrated chefs.

After canceling last year's event due to the pandemic, St. Barts continues its tradition of culinary excellence while paying tribute to French gastronomy. Dates are Nov. 10 through 14, and this year's lineup of award-winning chefs includes some of France's best culinary talent who will cook alongside local culinary teams at seven of the island's hotels and three restaurants, preparing multicourse tasting menus for dinner.

Each dinner is priced at approximately $156.

<https://bit.ly/3uLUVQO>

"This year in particular there is great anticipation for the festival," said Nils Dufau, president of the Territorial Tourism Committee of St. Barts. "We look forward to welcoming these acclaimed chefs as they showcase their talent and artistry to celebrate the tradition of French style cooking."

Among the 10 guest chefs are Eric Frechon from the Hotel Le Bristol in Paris, hosted by La Petite Plage hotel; Arnaud Lallement from L'Assiette Champenoise in Tinquieux, hosted by Hotel Rosewood Le Guanahani St. Barth; and Sebastian Vauxion from Le Sarkara at Le K2 Palace in Courcheval, hosted by Hotel Christopher.

Reservations for the festival dinners can be made through the participating hotels and restaurants.

In addition to the chefs' dinners, the festival will include other activities to be announced shortly. Here's a complete list of chefs and the participating hotels and restaurants.